THE SAVING POWER OF PRAYER
Lord, Teach Us to Pray

Many moons ago as a young freshman at Southern Missionary College (now Southern Adventist University), I often enjoyed accompanying my roommate, who worked in the studios of WSMC. Listening to one song in particular by Pat Boone’s melodic voice on those wonderful vinyl LPs left a special memory, and lifted my thoughts into the presence of God. Those lyrics spoke to my heart when I felt alone, afraid, or anxious.

My God and I go in the field together;
We walk and talk as good friends should and do;
We clasp our hands, our voices ring with laughter;
My God and I walk through the meadow’s hue.

In that beautiful chapter, “The Privilege of Prayer,” in the book Steps to Christ, God’s messenger penned these simple yet eloquent words: “Prayer is the opening of the heart to God as to a friend.”

We live in a time when our society virtually worships the wisdom of this world. There is an innate sentiment that we can resolve any problem in our personal lives or in the life of the Church through our own acumen, through the information gleaned from other professionals, or through the collaborative insight from a committee or board. As important as these may be, our dependence on God through prayer is an absolute essential that undergirds Heaven’s blessing on each of our lives and on His Church.

Prayer… Thousands of articles, sermons, and books have been written on this simple posture of submission to the celestial power of a loving, gracious, and all powerful heavenly Father. As a dad who craves the attention and affection of my own children, our heavenly Father ardently longs to fellowship and bless each of us as His children. And, He longs to bless His Church. Yes, this church — our Seventh-day Adventist Church — “enfeebled and defective as it may be, is the only object on Earth on which He bestows His supreme regard,” Selected Messages, Volume II, page 396.

Across North America and the world field, God has guided us as His disciples to embrace and experience the beauty of the Garden of Eden through a renewed emphasis on prayer — where we practice living in the presence of God. It is our privilege to come to that garden alone. It is time for us to walk with Him and talk with Him.

I praise God for our emphasis on prayer ministries, and for all our prayer coordinators who have echoed the words of Luke 11:1, “Lord, teach us to pray.” Prayer overflows with power for the Church, and for our personal connection to the One who cherishes us as His own.

I discovered the amazing influence of prayer in my own life in a chapel just outside Newbold College in England. In those quiet morning moments as a student who desperately needed God’s direction and blessing, I heard the gentle whisper of God speaking to me through His Word. Ever since that moment, Philippians 4:6,7 has been His extraordinary promise to me. I especially love the simple, reassuring wording of this passage from the New Living Translation:

“Don’t worry about anything; instead, pray about everything. Tell God what you need, and thank Him for all He has done. Then you will experience God’s peace, which exceeds anything we can understand. His peace will guard your hearts and minds as you live in Christ Jesus.”

D.L. Moody once said, “Every movement of God can be traced back to a kneeling figure.” Until we get to Heaven, we may never know who was protected, encouraged, or saved as a result of our prayers. Lord, teach us to pray!

COVER: Cindy and Rick Mercer, pastoral couple in the Carolina Conference.
God led Cindy Mercer to pray for her husband, Rick. God saved him and called him to the Gospel ministry. Now they pastor in the Carolina Conference where God is using them to save others.

“Do not be anxious about anything, but in every situation, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God,” Philippians 4:6, NIV.

Cindy Mercer was fed up. She was ready to leave her husband.

His toxic lifestyle of drug abuse, alcoholism, and lasciviousness was tearing their family apart.

“I hated him,” said Mercer. “I cried out to God … I can’t continue to live like this!”

But, just when she was about to walk out, she heard a voice say, “If you leave him, you won’t have a testimony.” Then the voice continued, even louder, “I want to use your husband in the ministry.”

“I laughed out loud,” recalled Mercer, being honest about her reaction.

She knew it was God talking to her, but she was still unsure about what was going to happen.

“I knew that I was at a pivotal point, not only in our marriage, but for me, individually, as a Christian,” she said.

What happened next is an example of the power of prayer and intercessory prayer, particularly in the case of marriages, which prayer leaders say are a main target of the enemy.

“Marriage according to Scripture is designed to show the world what God’s love looks like, because He says He is the husband and the Church is His bride,” said Melissa Weisner, who conducts seminars on prayer in the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference and abroad.

Prayer Saves
Cindy Mercer decided to stay and go to war. She was going to fight for her marriage. The battle preparation began by falling to her knees. She had an appointment with God at 4 o’clock each morning. She prayed, read her Bible, and wrote in a journal just about everyday.
At one point, she began fasting three days at a time. “At first, I was fasting and praying for God to change my husband,” said Mercer, who had been periodically attending a Methodist church. “But, something very dramatic happened during this process. It no longer was about my husband anymore. It was about me and God, and God began to change me. I realized that I had just been playing church. I didn’t take God seriously.”

In addition to her praying, Mercer enlisted the help of one of her co-workers who seemed to be a man of faith. “Dave” was an anesthesiologist at the hospital where Mercer was a nurse in Pine Bluff, Arkansas. She noticed Dave would pray with his patients before administering anesthesia, and that he wrote their names in a prayer book he kept in a pocket on his scrubs. Mercer felt comfortable talking to Dave, so she asked him if he would add her name and her husband’s to his book. Dave, who was Adventist, did that and more. He asked Mercer if it was okay to visit her husband, Rick, at home and offer to give him Bible study. Mercer had introduced Dave to her husband at a company Christmas party, so they were somewhat acquainted. She liked Dave’s idea. By this time, Rick Mercer had been noticing his wife get up early in the morning and pray and study her Bible, and fall asleep with it in her lap at night. He noticed a change in her, a peacefulness that he hadn’t seen before. So when Dave made the 30-mile trip to his house, and asked him if he’d be willing to give him at least one hour a week to study the Bible, Rick said “yes.”

The very next week, Dave and the Mercers began studying each Thursday night. “Within three to four weeks of studying the Bible, we quit arguing, we weren’t fighting anymore; things were very peaceful in our home,” said Cindy Mercer.

Indeed, the Holy Spirit was working. After about a year of Bible study, prayer, and fasting, the Mercers were baptized into Dave’s Seventh-day Adventist church. Dave, who was an elder, baptized them. About two weeks later, Dave died from injuries he suffered in a car crash, which also claimed the life of his wife.

Cindy Mercer recalled what Dave said about her husband the last time she saw him before the accident: “God’s got great plans for him.” And, he was right. About nine months after being baptized, Rick Mercer was ordained an elder. Not long after that, his wife said the Conference leadership noticed he was “on fire for the Lord,” and asked him to become a lay pastor.

But, God didn’t want him to stop there. About two years later, the Oklahoma Conference contacted Rick Mercer about moving to Oklahoma and going into ministry full time. He obliged, and preached there a little more than six years before moving to North Carolina, where he’s now pastor of the Morganton Church. Cindy Mercer is director of women’s ministries for the Carolina Conference.

Wherever they go, the couple is a source of inspiration to people who hear about how prayer not only saved their marriage, but changed them individually.

“When she started praying and fasting for me, everything changed,” said Rick Mercer, pastor. “All of a sudden, her eyes had love and compassion in them. That was the first time in my life that I saw Jesus lived out in somebody.”

“You cannot stomp sin out of your life, and how, more specifically, it has brought people to Christ — or back to Him.

“It’s the lifeline for our churches,” said Mary Nelson, a prayer coordinator in the Gulf Coast Church in Biloxi, Mississippi.

She said prayer leaders from around her Conference come together once a week to take prayer requests and share praises. She said there’s one woman who’s not an Adventist who has attended Camp Meeting several years in a row, “and we believe it’s because we’ve been praying for her.”

“Everything that happens I think has to be bathed in prayer; nothing happens without it,” said Nelson, who adheres to the words in Philippians 4:6. “We don’t worry about anything; we pray about everything.”

Prayer Brings Happiness to Homes

Melissa Weisner is a firm believer in that. She said at one point the tension between her and her husband had gotten so bad, that “the cat and the dog would not share the same space with us.”

“If we were both in the same room together, one went one way and the other went the other way,” said Weisner, who attends Oasis Church in Portland, Tennessee.

She said she prayerfully began looking up Scripture that described what she wanted to see in her husband, and she did the same for herself.

“I needed to live up to what He is calling me to be, and so I started searching Scripture for what a good wife and mother is supposed to be, and I started praying those into my own life.”

Weisner said she finally got a chance to sit down with her husband, and she showed him all the Scriptures she found and the prayers she had also written to go with them. She said he was “blown away,” and things “changed dramatically.” Now, she said the two conduct prayer seminars together.
At one time, Melissa and Eric Weisner did not get along; now the saving power of God has brought happiness and love to their home. They teach prayer seminars in the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference.

“We have a ministry together,” she said. “My kids feel the presence of God in our home. Now we are mentoring other couples, and we’re watching God work in their lives the way He worked in ours.”

Rosalind McFarland is women’s ministries director at Oasis. She said God may not answer prayers when we want Him to, but He does so in His own time, and they’re usually right on time.

“Sometimes prayers are answered immediately, sometimes slower,” said McFarland. “And sometimes it’s years and years of talking to God.”

Persistent Prayer Answered

Mary Patton can relate to the longevity. When she became Adventist, her husband wasn’t much of a churchgoer. But, Patton said she started praying for him, as did members of her Sabbath School class, who also called her husband and prayed with him over the phone. Her husband began attending church with her, and after about 10 years, he became a member.

“I am a product of collective prayer,” said George Patton, who is a prayer ministry leader along with his wife at First Church in Huntsville, Alabama, in the South Central Conference. “I wasn’t in the Church at all. God does some miracu-
DO YOU HAVE SOMEONE YOU WANT TO SEE SAVED?

As we approach the 2019 Year of Pastoral and Lay Evangelism, we invite you to list five names of individuals that you will pray for each day. They may be relatives, friends, neighbors, or even enemies. After you make the list, place it where you can easily refer to it each day during your prayer time. Our intercessory pleadings in their behalf may be the means by which their names may be written in the Book of Life.

When God was looking for someone to intercede on behalf of Jerusalem, he found no one. Thus, we find the sad words in Ezekiel 22:30, “And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none.” Friend, I want God to find me standing in the gap? Can God depend on you to stand in the gap for others? Let’s be the one that our heavenly Father can count on.

FIVE INTERCESSORY PRAYER TIPS

1. Pray that God will cause you to weep regarding their lost condition.
2. Pray that God will remove all hindrances to their salvation.
3. Believe for God’s glory in their situation.
4. Thank God in advance for their new life in Christ.
5. Pray for their continued freedom in Christ.

“Let the workers stand alone in God, weeping, praying, laboring for the salvation of their fellow men . . . Learn to exercise faith in presenting your neighbors before the throne of grace and pleading with God to touch their hearts. In this way effectual missionary work may be done. Some may be reached who would not listen to a minister or a colporteur,” Counsels for the Church, page 61.
My parents were baptized without receiving Bible studies. My father read The Great Controversy, and was astounded by the salvific Gospel of mercy and forgiveness, and both of them immediately decided to become members of the Church that had such a truthful message. Since I was only one year old, I had the opportunity to witness their growth process and their amazement when discovering new gems in the Bible. They always shared them with my brothers and me, even though we were young. My father decided to become a pastor, and went to the seminary when I was six.

One of the things I recall more vividly is the sense of sacredness they had, and still do at 82 and 91. We would never place something on the Bible. We were not to criticize pastors or anyone in a sacred position. They used the story of David as he refused to kill Saul when he had the opportunity, because he had been anointed, chosen for a sacred mission. When they bought us new clothes, the first time we wore them was always Sabbath. My parents had a special box (I believe they still have the same one) in which they would put the money separated for offerings, or to help people in need. We would never touch that box; that money was sacred. That sense was so profound, that I remember my brother, Henry, as a teenager, when going to a soccer game or any other type of entertainment, would only use the money he received from our grandmother and uncles, never the allowance he got from my parents. He figured that money was sacred, because it came from the tithes. I could go on and on giving so many examples of little things like those.

Then, life happened. I grew up, became busy, stressed, and little by little lost that sense of spiritual wonder. I still believed the same things, went to the same church, obeyed the same rules; but, those things became part of a routine that I would never abandon, but which did not have the same spirit.

Nevertheless, God never ceases to try to open our spiritual eyes. He does it in different ways. One of the ways he has been using with me is through the work I do at the Southern Union Revolving Fund Department. This is a fund formed by money from church members, who make their savings available to the Union office to be used in loaning money to churches or schools at a significantly lower rate than what they could get in the secular market. It is a great way to do mission work. The Union pays the investors a higher interest rate than the bank normally pays. It is a win-win situation for both parties. Investors can make partial withdrawals as they need to, or close their accounts whenever they decide to, just by writing a note.

How did God use this to teach me a lesson? Very often, when investors have to withdraw money, they send a note explaining the reason for the withdrawal. Some other times they call and apologize for having the need to take money from their funds, and promise to replace the amount as soon as they can. At first, I wondered why it is that they feel the need to explain or apologize for using their own money, but little by little I began to see my parents in every one of them. They know that everything they have is God’s. They feel responsible for the use of it, and are eager to help fulfill God’s mission of spreading the wonderful message of mercy and forgiveness.

I am so thankful to be able to witness those people’s spirit. When we loan money, and see new churches, mortgage burning ceremonies, people getting baptized, and schools receiving children that will learn about God’s love, I thank God for these faithful people that do not care about the business, but the mission, and are blessed.

What do Adventist students around the world think mission is? That’s what Adventist Mission wanted to find out in 2017 when it launched its first-ever student film contest.

Student filmmakers from the United States to the Middle East, from the Philippines to Mexico, sent in their short films, hoping for a chance at the grand prize: an international trip to assist with filming a story for Mission Spotlight!

The “Mission is . . . ” film contest launched on April 7, 2017, at the Sonscreen film festival in California. Students from all over the world were encouraged to submit 30-second films that expressed what they think mission is, and why it’s still important today. The top 10 entries were then selected by a judging panel. These 10 films were posted on the Adventist Mission website, where the public voted for their favorite films. Adventist Mission believes that films showing mission work and how God is changing lives, are important tools for evangelism and building faith. That’s why Adventist Mission produces the Mission Spotlight and Mission 360˚ short films that church members across the world watch each Sabbath.

The Judges’ Choice Award is given to the film that was rated highest overall by the judging panel in areas such as creativity, quality, originality, and effective communication of the message. This year’s recipient, Madelyn Rogers, is a student at Southern Adventist University in Collegedale, Tennessee. Mission 360˚ interviewed her about her project.

Judges’ Choice | Madelyn Rogers

Mission 360˚: Where do you attend college?
Madelyn: I attend college at Southern Adventist University studying film production.

Mission 360˚: What attracted you to filmmaking?
Madelyn: I chose to pursue filmmaking because I’ve always loved to tell stories. I think film is one of the most powerful ways we can communicate and make an impact on others, and I love the endless possibilities it holds.

Mission 360˚: What motivated you to enter the contest?
Madelyn: I decided to enter at the last minute. I didn’t really think I could do it, but finally I realized that if I didn’t try, I wouldn’t learn anything, and I wanted to learn. I knew learning by experimentation always leaves the longest impression on me, so I took the dive, pulled together a crew, found an idea, and entered it.

Mission 360˚: What does your film mean to you? How did you choose to answer the prompt “Mission is . . .”?
Madelyn: My film to me is a mile marker for when I began to take my education into my own hands a little more, and something I can look back on that shows I can work with others to tell a story. I collaborated with one of my crew members on the idea. We expounded a bit on an old one he’d had that he was willing for us to use, and I was excited to find a way to jump outside the lines of what most people expected from a missions video.

Mission 360˚: What message do you hope people will take from your film?
Madelyn: Through my film, I hope others will be reminded that they don’t necessarily have to wait until they have an opportunity to go overseas — they can spread light right at home, maybe even next door. Mission starts with you.

Mission 360˚: How has your film or other films you may have seen that were submitted to the contest impacted your perspective of mission?
Madelyn: I think overall these films showed me that most people do think of faraway places when they think of mission, which is understandable and also not a bad thing. My perspective wasn’t enormously affected coming out of the contest, but I was glad that we were able to approach the idea from the angle of those who perhaps aren’t called to go overseas.
U.S. News & World Report, the global authority in hospital rankings and consumer advice, ranked Adventist Health System's Florida Hospital for Children's neonatology program No. 42 in the nation in the new 2018-19 Best Children's Hospitals rankings released recently.

The 12th annual Best Children's Hospitals rankings recognize the top 50 pediatric facilities across the U.S. in 10 pediatric specialties: cancer, cardiology and heart surgery, diabetes and endocrinology, gastroenterology and gastrointestinal surgery, neonatology, nephrology, neurology and neurosurgery, orthopedics, and pulmonology and urology.

"Florida Hospital for Children provides the highest quality, most advanced and compassionate care to the children and families we serve, and this first-ever ranking is a recognition of that steadfast commitment," said Daryl Tol, president and CEO of Florida Hospital and the Central Florida Division of Adventist Health System. "Delivering a baby prematurely or having a critically ill child is a very stressful time for parents. Our stellar team of talented nurses, physicians, and volunteers — who care for more than 2,000 babies in our neonatal intensive care unit each year — demonstrate their compassion and unmatched skill every day."

“The U.S. News Best Children’s Hospitals rankings highlight pediatric centers that deliver state-of-the-art medical care to children with complex conditions,” said Ben Harder, chief of health analysis at U.S. News. “Children with life-threatening or rare conditions need the level of quality care that these hospitals deliver day after day.”

U.S. News introduced the Best Children’s Hospitals rankings in 2007 to help families of children with rare or life-threatening illnesses find the best medical care available. They are the only comprehensive source of quality-related information on U.S. pediatric hospitals.

The U.S. News Best Children’s Hospitals rankings rely on clinical data and an annual survey of pediatric specialists. The ranking methodology factors in patient outcomes, such as mortality and infection rates, as well as available clinical resources and compliance with best practices.

This year’s rankings will be published in the U.S. News & World Report’s “Best Hospitals 2019” guidebook (ISBN 9781931469906), available in stores late September.
Allan Machado, D.Min., was elected by the combined election committee on June 24, 2018, to become the 24th president of the 63,994-member Florida Conference. The following morning he received a standing ovation from Conference staff at the morning worship and staff meeting.

“I am humbled by the opportunity to serve the Lord in this new chapter of my life,” says Machado. “I am blessed to be working with a team whose main priority is to serve the Lord.”

Machado’s main purpose in life is to serve the Lord and His Church. His heart has always been about serving the Lord. His desire is to be a good steward, and a tool in the hand of God as he endeavors to turn complex problems into healthy solutions.

“Dr. Machado has already evidenced extraordinary abilities as an organizer and capable administrator,” says Ron Smith, D.Min., Ph.D., president of the Southern Union and chair of the combined election committee. “His love for God and passion for Church growth will be a welcomed focus in our vast territory. We certainly embrace him, and will pray for his success as president of Florida Conference.”

The Lord has blessed Machado’s ministry from the days of holding offices in his local church, to pastoral service, and then leading to administration positions on the conference level of lay ministry coordinator, ministerial field secretary, vice president of Spanish-language ministries, assistant to the president, and executive secretary. He has admirably served as interim president since April 22, 2018, when Mike Cauley resigned this post because of health issues.

The Machado family includes Allan’s wife, Elsa; two sons, Alan and Erich; and one daughter, Tatiana. As this family takes over the leadership role in Florida Conference, members are asked to show support in prayers and encouragement.

CALHOUN MEMBERS PRODUCE AUDIO DRAMA

BY OMAR MIRANDA

It all began in 2002. I was doing a lot of counseling for a community agency that dealt with families and children in horrible situations.

I wrote a story, “Soul War: The Beginning,” as a way to answer the questions of the kids, teens, and parents whose lives were being destroyed by pain, conflict, divorce, crime, sin, death, and sometimes just straight-up evil. More specifically, this is a project that would be able to answer the questions of those people who are interested in Christianity, but believe the devil's lies saying God created evil, sin, pain and death, and it’s all His fault.

The story opens with Satan and his generals in God's throne room in Heaven. They are gloating about Adam and Eve's recent decision to sin. The story is a dramatic, humorous, but always insightful look into the plan of salvation and the great controversy. It features a lot of Christian, and specifically Seventh-day Adventist, theology and doctrine.

Everybody who read the story absolutely loved it and told me the same thing: “Omar, you should totally turn this into an audio book, a movie, or a graphic novel!” I thought it was a great idea, because, to be honest, I didn’t think a lot of kids and teens were interested in reading 17 pages of writing. But, one thing stood in my way — money!

I began to feverishly pray about it. I felt God wanted me to do the same, so I spent a lot of years, on and off, contacting schools and organizations to see if they would be interested in recording and/or performing this play … for free! Nothing happened.

Well, days turned into weeks and weeks into months … fast-forward 15 years later.

It was late 2016. I was frustrated and couldn’t stop feeling that I was letting God down. So, without any prior experience, I created a website on my own, posted the story, and reached out to Chad Mutchler, a fellow Calhoun, Georgia, Church member and musician. I asked if he would be willing to write at least one original song for the story. Little did I know that Chad would totally blow me away with his creative mind, his vision, his enthusiasm, and most of all, his connections!

All the glory goes to God, because in one-and-a-half years things came together. Chad and I partnered financially with our local church in Calhoun, and God consistently showed up. Both the illustrator and the composer of the original music score work for some prestigious clients. Through God’s miraculous work and timing, we got their services for a fraction of the cost.

Lastly, the members of our own local church in Calhoun gave us tons of prayers, their voices, acting talents (all voices except one are from our church), and more importantly, their money.

This dramatized audio story entitled “Soul War” (http://soulwar.org) is now a reality. It has a totally interactive website. Visitors can listen to the full story, as well as download and personalize evangelistic materials for their local area. They can also search for the closest local Adventist church, interact with additional Bible study resources, and donate toward future stories or episodes.

This is an amazing worldwide evangelistic digital opportunity that has surpassed all of our team’s dreams.

I know that my trust and faith in God has been stretched and strengthened, and I can’t wait to see what miracles God has in store in the future.
church unity is difficult to come by these days, but perhaps the reason we are missing this unity is that we aren't focusing on others the way we should. The Dothan-Enterprise Church began the "Totally Involved" plan on December 16, 2017, which included small groups, Bible studies, community services, and Christian fellowship components to be developed and implemented throughout 2018 in Enterprise, Alabama. The opportunity for community service and church involvement was made readily available, and the people utilized it.

The church organized into four small groups, divided by families, and sprang into their communities with the intention to keep church members motivated by the word of God, and to stimulate their neighbors to be part of the Christian family. They began with the understanding that the responsibility for lost souls is on Christ, and it is He that empowers them to be winsome of their neighbors. As the church was willing, God provided success. The entire church's involvement in helping each other, as well as local families with different needs, is what made the plan successful. Their concern for and focus on others instead of themselves brought a powerful unity to the church family. This focus led to not only meeting community needs, but also providing a family environment and Christian fellowship every Sabbath — and not just at church during worship time, but in their homes as well. Unity within the church was becoming tangible.

Inside the local church, small groups assumed every function of the church: Sabbath School, divine worship, youth service, and more. Each element was directed through a small group. The church also activated its social networks on Facebook and YouTube, to share activities and messages with those who could not attend, and with those that perhaps weren't that interested in spiritual things at all. The members couldn't make the social impact they needed online by simply scrolling past the church updates or ignoring the live feeds. They needed to actively “like” and share each of those updates, as well as post positive messages about their small groups and activities. By simply taking a few seconds to do this, the reach potential grew exponentially.

After four months the church could see God working in families, young people, and children, and the number of visitors to the church increased by an astounding 150 percent. Among the visitors was the family of José and Juanita Reyes. The Reyeses saw a post on the Dothan-Enterprise Church's Facebook page, and one Sabbath morning they simply decided to get up, get ready, and visit the church. They soon joined a small group and started having Bible studies, and as a result of the fellowship and spiritual growth, the parents decided to get married and surrender their lives to God through baptism.

Another visitor, Eladio Perez, a retired pastor of a Pentecostal church in Philadelphia, had recently moved to the city of Enterprise; his girlfriend, Leida Delgado, had received an invitation to visit, and together they began attending. After several months of attending the church and learning the Adventist doctrines, they also decided to get married in the Dothan-Enterprise Church, and give their lives to God through baptism.

It is increasingly clear that the Holy Spirit has been moving in this church, and will continue to illuminate the city of Enterprise through His word. Four months after starting the project, the church concluded the first stage with a campaign titled "A New Dawn of Hope for Your Life." From the beginning of the project to the campaign, nine people gave their lives through baptism. Now the church continues with the second stage of this project, with faith and hope in God that it will be a blessing for their Hispanic community, and that the lives of the people they impact can be transformed through His word.

If unity is something you need in your church, consider focusing on reaching out to others, and taking the time to be supportive of your brothers and sisters in Christ.
During a special meeting, the School Board of Volusia County recently approved a historic agreement with Adventist Health System’s Florida Hospital.

In the auditorium of Deltona High School, this partnership established the Florida Hospital Healthy Futures Program of Volusia County Schools. This agreement is the first of its kind between a school district and major health care provider, and will serve as a national model. The agreement includes the following:

- A five-year, $2 million commitment by Florida Hospital
- Direct involvement in the district’s six high school health care academies and nine high school and middle school health programs, including internships
- Coordinated care for student athletes, including a dedicated certified athletic trainer to serve as a school liaison
- Health care services to students at 36 schools with the highest chronic student absenteeism
- Florida Hospital naming rights to all high school and middle school health care academies and programs

With 78 schools, there are more than 63,000 students enrolled in Volusia County Schools.

“These students represent the future, and it is important that we help set them up for success, and that starts here, today,” said David Ottati, CEO Adventist Health System’s Central Florida Division - North Region, which includes the Florida Hospitals in Volusia County. “Since the early 1990s, Florida Hospital has been involved with Volusia’s Health Science Career Academies, and this partnership is an extension of the hospitals’ long-term commitment to their success.”

Ottati explained that the partnership strives to address three main challenges impacting local schools, including chronic absenteeism, student athlete health, and career development within the health care industry.

“Last year, almost 17 percent of our students were chronically absent from school. Missing school for any number of reasons, including illness, can be a barrier for our students to learn, earn good grades, and even graduate,” said Tom Russell, superintendent of schools. “Our goal is to decrease chronic absenteeism across Volusia County by 10 percent, which could significantly impact our students’ education and help position them for success.”

At the 36 schools with the highest rate of chronic absenteeism, Florida Hospital will help students with access to Florida Hospital eCare urgent care providers. Via the eCare app, students and their parents can receive a live and secure tele-health consultation for a range of urgent care issues such as pink eye, coughs/colds/flu, minor injuries, allergies, urinary tract infections, and more.

Florida Hospital will also assist students whose families are underinsured or uninsured and cannot afford care, helping students combat chronic conditions, and ease their journey toward wellness.

In addition, Florida Hospital will develop streamlined and coordinated care for Volusia County Schools’ student athletes, including improved concussion protocols.

According to a study in the Journal of Athletic Training, there are an estimated 300,000 sport-related traumatic brain injuries — most of which are concussions — each year in the U.S. In addition, sports are second only to motor vehicle crashes as the leading cause of traumatic brain injury for young people, ages 15 to 24 years.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports that concussions can result in headaches, nausea, and irritability. While most people do not suffer from long-term impacts from a concussion, between 10 and 20 percent may experience additional symptoms, such as depression, headaches, or difficulty concentrating.

“As a parent myself, I understand how nerve-wracking competitive sports can be and the potential for injuries,” Ottati said.
Parents should feel a sense of peace, knowing that if your child does get hurt in practice or a game, they now have a strong health care system standing by, ready to help their family during their time of need.”

Furthermore, Florida Hospital has committed to helping students interested in a career in the health care industry. Florida Hospital will be directly involved in the district’s six high school health care academies and nine high school and middle school health programs.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, health care jobs are expected to have the fastest employment growth during the next 10 years, and Florida will have more than 50,000 job openings for nurses and nursing assistants in the next seven years. Within the health care industry, there is a large need for additional medical assistants, medical secretaries, and health services managers.

“With the help from community partners like Florida Hospital, our goal is to continue to create pathways that allow students to directly connect coursework with industry certifications and work-based learning opportunities to help prepare them for careers in the health care industry,” said Kelly L. Amy, M.Ed., manager of strategic partnerships for Volusia County Schools.

“Our school board is committed to expanding vocational and college readiness programs, but cannot do it alone,” Russell added. “Florida Hospital has stepped up to the plate. This is an exciting time for students in Volusia County Schools.”

AHS ER Physician Demonstrates Dangers of Hot Cars

A n emergency medicine physician at Adventist Health System’s Florida Hospital Memorial Medical Center wants to remind adults how dangerous cars can become for children during the hot summer months in Florida.

To demonstrate how quickly vehicles can heat up and explain the onset of heat stroke symptoms in children, Steve Swearingen, M.D., emergency medicine physician at Florida Hospital Memorial Medical Center, sat in a car with engine and A/C turned off and the windows rolled up for 15 minutes.

The purpose of this short demonstration was to highlight how dangerous it can be to leave a child in a car.

“Heatstroke is more common during these summer months, April through September,” Swearingen said. “When body temperature reaches 107 degrees, cells start to die and organs begin to fail. Symptoms of heatstroke in adults and children who are trapped in a hot car include dry and flushed skin, fast heart rate, confusion, hallucinations, seizures, or loss of consciousness. In extreme cases, death can occur.”

Even with cloud coverage and a sprinkle of rain during the demonstration, it was 84 degrees outside, and the parked car’s temperature quickly climbed nearly 20 degrees to just over 102 degrees.

While in the car, Swearingen’s vital signs were monitored, including heart rate, blood pressure, respiration, and oxygen saturation.

Upon entering the vehicle, his heart rate was 87 beats per minute (BPM), but 15 minutes later it had risen to 105 BPM.

“This is a drastic increase for someone who is sitting still. The average resting heart rate for an adult is between 50 and 100 BPM,” Swearingen said. “Thanks to the clouds! I honestly don’t think I would have made it the full 15 minutes if the sun had been out. During the dry run earlier this week, with the sun out, the car got to 116 degrees in just 10 minutes.”

In the U.S., 21 states have laws with specific language addressing leaving a child unattended in a vehicle. Four states allow a period of time that a child may be left unattended before it becomes a crime. Under Florida law, a child can be left alone in a vehicle for 15 minutes or less, as long as the car’s engine is turned off.

According to NoHeatStroke.org, there were 42 pediatric vehicular heatstroke deaths in the U.S. in 2017. This year, there have already been 12 deaths reported.

“Children’s thermoregulatory systems don’t work as well as adults, so they can show signs of heat stroke or heat exhaustion three to five times faster,” Swearingen said. “The changes in my vital signs over the course of 10 minutes can happen to a child in just two minutes.”

To help prevent accidents from occurring, Swearingen suggested a few tips to adults.

“Maybe put your purse, your phone or your wallet in the backseat when you drive,” Swearingen said. “These are things you are more likely to remember to take out of the car with you, and you can remember that your child is in the car.”
Carolina Conference President Leslie Louis and a team of nine young adults recently went on a ShareHim evangelism trip to South Africa. The team spent more than a week in the kingdom of Lesotho in a town called Mohale’s Hoek. The area had already been exposed to Adventist teachings, so the series of 11 sermons served as a revival and recommitment for those who live there. The team had an hour of devotion every morning, and held meetings every evening. The nightly messages focused on the book of Jonah, and near the end of the series, the sermons covered baptism. For those who expressed a desire for baptism, the group dedicated a day to providing clarification and further understanding. Since the church had no baptistry and the river was too cold, the group drove an hour to a church with a baptistry, and 27 individuals were baptized. Several more candidates are preparing for baptism as well. The ShareHim team also ministered to prison inmates for several days, focusing their messages on God’s faithfulness.

The trip wasn’t all work, though. The team also went zip lining and went on a safari. Past ShareHim trips were mostly composed of older adults, but recently the focus has shifted to involving young adults in evangelism. Louis expressed how amazing it was to connect with the group of young adults. He had been on many mission trips, including one ShareHim trip, in the past, but never before had a group become so close. The group bonded both socially and spiritually. He expressed how it was “hard to part” from each other when it was time to go their separate ways.

The trip was an amazing success. Site manager Victor Dyman took care of the ShareHim team, making sure they had everything they needed and the trip flowed smoothly. They felt God truly had His hand in this trip, and both the ShareHim team and their new brothers and sisters in Christ in Lesotho were blessed by the experience.

Club Surprises Others With Kindness

The funds collected during this year’s Dollar Club were distributed in the community on Thursday afternoon. Armed with 70 $10 gift cards and $800 in cash and Walmart gift cards for groceries, the Carolina Conference Communication team and several members of the Conference pastoral staff set out to bless the community.

Their first stop was a local homeless shelter. As soon as they arrived, they found friends. Various members of the team went table to table talking and laughing with the guests as they gave each person a $10 gift card to a local food establishment. One especially grateful guest was four months pregnant and struggling to make ends meet.

They then drove to a local grocery outlet and surprised patrons by paying for their groceries. Many of those served by the generosity of the Dollar Club had never heard of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, and some were moved to tears at the kindness of strangers. Two of the ladies were buying flowers for a woman whose husband had recently died and were extremely grateful for the unexpected thoughtfulness.

The team then hit the streets of downtown Waynesville and gave out more $10 restaurant gift cards. The recipients were surprised and thankful and asked questions about the team and their church. People just walking down the street high-fived the team members. A few passersby even stopped their cars to find out what was going on. Incidentally, the mayor of Waynesville and the “First Dog” also enjoyed the Dollar Club’s generosity.

AWA Follows Jesus’ Example

Since the birth of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in the 1800s, the church has utilized every kind of vehicle to bring the Word of God to those who don’t know Him, including airplanes. Adventist World Aviation (AWA) was founded by former General Conference President Bob Folkenberg. In the 1990s he made AWA an independent organization, and it continues to serve the worldwide church today. Now AWA has around 26 aircraft and does mission work on five continents.

Of the 7 billion people on Earth, 2 billion have not heard of Christ. Of those 2 billion, 800 million live beyond geographical barriers. In these areas there are often no roads to reach the interior of the country, and it can take days or even weeks to reach people on the ground. AWA makes it possible to reach these places quickly. They minister to the people living in these remote areas by delivering food and vaccines, providing medical evacuations, holding health clinics, and building schools. Their work has greatly decreased the number of women dying in childbirth and has stopped 35 epidemics. They also return the bodies of deceased individuals to their loved ones and assist in giving them a proper burial.

Throughout Jesus’ ministry, He took care of people’s physical needs first. AWA follows this example by taking care of the needs of the people and earning their trust. By doing this, Christ’s love is seen in action, and people are more willing to open their hearts and ears to the truth.

For more information on how to get involved with AWA’s mission, visit their website at www.flyawa.org or email info@flyawa.org.
Orlando Spanish Church Baptizes 21 New Members

Orlando Spanish Church recently experienced the blessings resulting from the fulfillment of Matthew 28:19: “Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.” Following this mandate from the Lord Jesus Christ, the church received blessings from 21 new souls accepting Jesus Christ during a recent evangelistic series, “Todos Tenemos Vida (We All Have Life),” with Roger Hernandez, Southern Union Conference director of ministerial and evangelism.

The church grew not only in number, but also in unity. Oscar Tavera, local pastor, coordinated community reach-out efforts by mobilizing church members in preparation for the campaign. With the support of life groups and church leaders, the congregation was blessed every night by powerful messages, excellent musical performances, and the presence of a large number of guests. Many more attendees requested Bible study as they prepare to join the Adventist Church in a future baptism.

Dimas Rosado Becomes Centenarian

Dimas Rosado was born March 26, 1918, in Barrio Esperanza, Arecibo, Puerto Rico. His 100th birthday was celebrated with his family, friends, and brethren at Deltona Spanish Church, Deltona, Fla., where he has attended for 31 years.

He is the ninth of 11 siblings born to hard-working farmers, Don Manuel Rosado and Doña Mercedes Ruiz. His parents knew the Adventist message through a book, El Rey Que Viene (The King is Coming), sold by one of the first colporteurs in Puerto Rico. After many interesting experiences, the family of 13 was baptized. An Adventist church was built on their farm, originally made up mostly of his large family who are considered pioneers of the Adventist movement in the north of Puerto Rico. Today, many souls and churches have been the product of this conversion at the beginning of the 20th century.

Rosado studied at the College of the Antilles in Cuba with two of his brothers. There he met Ena Leiva Fernández, who would later become his wife. They married in New York in 1946, and were married for 65 years until she passed in October 2011.

He worked as a farmer in Puerto Rico, taxi driver in New York, elementary school teacher in Puerto Rico again, and social worker in Florida. Rosado always has been a missionary, and has kept God first in his life. Today, his family and friends thank God for his long life.

His only son, Melvin Rosado, is married to Zaida Suarez, and they live in Deltona, Fla. He has two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Jason O’Rourke Ordained at Mount Olive Church

Jason O’Rourke was ordained to the Gospel ministry on May 26, 2018, at the Mount Olive Church in Apopka, Fla. He has served for 10 years as a chaplain within the Neurological Intensive Care Unit and the Emergency Department at Florida Hospital.

After serving in the United States Army for 12 years, he transitioned to ministry by attending and graduating from Oakwood University, Huntsville, Ala., with a B.A. in theology, and Andrews University, Berrien Springs, Mich., with a master of divinity degree. He is currently working on a doctor of ministry degree with Claremont School of Theology in California.

O’Rourke served during the Ebola crisis, participating in the planning of the Florida Hospital response, and supported families in the wake of the PULSE crisis in Orlando. He has spoken in multiple countries, and has written a book, Sex-U-Ology: God, Gender, Marriage, and Intimacy.

O’Rourke met Melissa Gail at Andrews University, and they were married September 9, 2011. They have two daughters, Abrielle Joy and Myla Grace. The O’Rourke family is currently moving to the Netherlands Union, where Jason will serve as pastor for the Bethani Church in Almer.

It is O’Rourke’s hope for his ministry to positively influence all with whom he comes in contact with the love of Jesus.
Rogersville Intentional With Children

The Children’s Ministries Department of the Rogersville, Tenn., Church, has been very active in getting children involved in learning about God and His love.

Every month on the fourth Sabbath, the children get to go into a classroom with a few teachers, do crafts, sing songs, and ultimately get closer to Him.

The children are learning how God created the animals for people to enjoy and take care of. To illustrate this lesson, the group recently went to a local wildlife park called Bays Mountain in Kingsport, Tenn. There they enjoyed a picnic lunch provided by some of the adults in the church, followed by a walk through the animal habitats.

They learned about the wolves in the park—what they eat, how often they are fed, where the wolves come from, and more.

The church has much more planned for their children, as well as the children in their community. Sharon Borton and Donna Owen have been leading the team of adults recently, along with the aid of other church members—Stephanie and Leroy Morie, Doug and Brandy Jenkins, Curtis and Ruby Hinrichs, Tim and Mae Luttrell, Lauren Freire, and others.

Programs and activities with the children are vital to their growth. Prayers are appreciated for the children (and adults) at Rogersville Church and the surrounding community as they lead the next generation to God. Jesus said, “Let the little children come to me, and do not hinder them, for the kingdom of heaven belongs to such as these,” Matthew 19:14.

Pillars of Faith Celebrates Guests

The members of the Pillars of Faith Company in Ellenwood, Ga., took time April 28, 2018, to affirm others with a Community Guest Day. They specifically honored Roosevelt Smith, Lithonia chief of police, and Rashad Richey, local radio personality and community worker.

The day was filled with activities, including guest speaker Roseclair Bulgin. A special moment during divine worship included the church elders praying for the honorees. Numerous guests from the community attended the special celebration.

Rickie Holmes, pastor, presented both honorees with plaques and gifts of appreciation. The honorees gave words of appreciation and inspiration.

The event was followed by a delicious vegetarian meal. There was lots of food, fun, fellowship, and good conversations.

Later that day the church members went back into the community to pass out tracts and continue to invite the community to attend the Pillars of Faith Church. Going forward, the church members plan to make Community Guest Day an annual event.

The Rogersville, Tenn., Church has a plan to teach the children in their church and community about God. They set aside one Sabbath monthly to do crafts and sing songs, with the goal of getting closer to God and better understanding His love.

Four Children Baptized on VBS Sabbath at Gainesville Church

The Gainesville, Ga., Church is intentional about Vacation Bible School as evangelism. This year, four children decided to be baptized on Vacation Bible School Sabbath to show their love for Jesus, and eight more decided they wanted to be baptized as well.

The Gainesville, Ga., Church, during the week of June 4, 2018, was transformed into the town of Capernaum as they participated in Vacation Bible School (VBS): Sea of Miracles, where children learned about the life and ministry of Jesus.

VBS is one of Gainesville’s highlight evangelistic events of the year. This year, led by Kathy Gossett, they registered 27 children and 22 support staff members. Fourteen of the children were not Adventists. Volunteers dressed in era-appropriate tunics, while the children participated in singing songs on the North Shore of Galilee, hearing stories about Jesus and Peter at Simon’s House, and using their creativity with crafts at Beit Saida Village. Later, they enjoyed some prayer time up on the mountaintop, and then exerted energy playing games in the Shepherds’ Field. All of these modules highlighted the miracles that the disciples experienced with Jesus.

Along with VBS being evangelistic-driven, the event is also made to be mission-driven. Every year they look at how they can support their local community, whether it is collecting shoes for refugee children, giving stuffed animals to the local police and fire departments, or, this year, collecting donations for the Georgia Mountain Food Bank. Every day the children were challenged to bring at least one nonperishable food item, and at the end of the week, they had collected more than 150 pounds of food. It has shown to be a great means of getting the children thinking about how they can help serve.

The week capped off with a cache of 1,000 water balloons and a hot Georgia afternoon as the children and some adult volunteers watered the grass, but mostly themselves, with a water balloon challenge. Afterwards, homemade ice cream was served while everyone dried out and fellowshipped together as the leaders passed out bags with all the crafts that had been made throughout the week.

All of this is typical for a Gainesville VBS, but one thing happened that helped visualize what Jesus has called His own to do — to be a witness to Christ. Four of the VBS children were baptized during the special VBS Sabbath on June 9, 2018.

With no pressure or prodding from their parents, Manuel, Maria, Jeremiah, and Emma made the decision on their own to follow Jesus, and participated in Bible study prior to VBS. Each child gave their testimony that they wanted to follow the example of Christ, and go out and witness to their friends, family, and anyone else who does not know Jesus. These four children soon found out how much of a witness they were, as about eight hands from other VBS children said they were interested in baptism. Juanfer Monsalve, pastor, is now planning a new baptismal class.

VBS is often thought of as being just fun and games, and an excuse to go crazy with decorations. For the Gainesville Church, it happily amounted to more souls for Christ’s Kingdom.

Every year they count on volunteer support and creative minds to transform the weekly worship center into a themed VBS destination that will appeal to the senses and transport guests into a fun-learning environment that they enjoy. Gainesville church members encourage members in churches that do not host a Vacation Bible School to support one in some way — it’s fun, there’s a lot to be learned, and there is always the possibility of winning souls for Jesus!

Linda Anderson started work in the Adventist Book Center (ABC) in 1994, while in the Iowa-Missouri Conference. During the nine years she spent there, she learned invaluable lessons from the managers of the store. It was also here that she gained experience in problem solving, as many of the managers were new to their job, and both they and Anderson had to learn together.

Anderson moved to the Gulf States Conference in 2003, and in 2006 became the first female manager of the Gulf States ABC. Anderson treated the position as a mission post, and was wholly devoted to the Conference. This devotion was echoed in her connection to her family, and above all, her relationship with God.

During her time as manager of the Gulf States ABC, Anderson traveled more than 200,000 miles to sell and deliver food and books throughout the Conference. Her passion for meeting people's needs and making a way to provide what each person needed was an excellent example of "Christ's method alone," The Ministry of Healing, page 139. Jesus could most certainly be seen in her and her work.

Anderson is quick not to take all of the credit for the success of the ABC and meeting people's needs during her tenure. She thanks her assistant, Jane Haney, for her hard work and long hours that kept the ABC running smoothly while she was there. Anderson announced and celebrated her retirement at the 2018 Gulf States Camp Meeting at Bass Memorial Academy in May. The celebration was appropriately coupled with a special sale at the ABC.

When asked about what she’ll do in her retirement, Anderson didn’t offer any definite plans, except that she anticipates spending more joyful time with her family, particularly children and grandchildren. "Our children and grandchildren" was the daily prayer request that Anderson brought to the Conference staff worships, without fail. If for some reason Anderson was unable to attend staff worship, someone almost always added the family prayer request on her behalf, knowing that’s what she would say.

Anderson also anticipates that her hobbies of horses, cats, and animal rescue will occupy the rest of her time. She takes God's call to stewardship of His creation seriously, and it is evident in the care she provides to her animals.

Most importantly to Anderson, and what she would like the world to know, is that Jesus is her best friend, and that He can be everyone’s too. "Remember," her office voicemail sounds, "God's crazy about you."
Merle Blake Landis, 89, born September 3, 1928, in Canton, Ohio, died November 3, 2017, in Huntsville, Ala. When he was five years old, his mother became an Adventist through evangelistic meetings. As her children grew, she saw to it that they went to church school, and would be able to continue through high school. During his senior year at Mount Vernon Academy (MVA), and feeling the need to support God’s work in his family, Landis hitchhiked home for his father’s baptism.

He graduated from MVA in 1946, and colporteured during the summer so he could attend Washington Missionary College (now Washington Adventist University) in Takoma Park, Md. After his second year of college, he married Mildred Arlene Robbins. His father-in-law taught his four sons and three sons-in-law the contracting and bricklaying trade. Landis finished working his way through college as an employee in this family business.

He finished college in 1953 with a double major in theology and business. After graduation, they moved to Philadelphia, Pa., where he built two churches. In 1954, they transitioned to Oak Park Academy in Nevada, Iowa, where he taught Bible, science, and industrial arts. In the summers, he started working on his master’s degree at Potomac University in Washington, D.C., which served as the Adventist seminary at the time, and graduated from Andrews University in 1960. In 1958, they moved to High- land Academy in Portland, Tenn., where he was boy’s dean and math teacher. In 1995, the academy named the boy’s dorm Landis Hall in his honor. In 1961, he fulfilled his dream of entering the ministry in the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference. In 1969, they moved to the Gulf States Conference where he pastored the Huntsville Central Church for 14 years before retiring in 1995.

He is survived by two daughters, Sherrie Landis and Merlene (Tony) Pitt; four grandchildren, Kelley (Allen) Fowler, Andrew Clark, Thomas (Jennifer) Turk, and Mark Turk; and six great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his wife of 68 years, Mildred; parents Merle Dewey and Orpha Landis; sister Jayne Silva; brother Lowell Landis; and infant grandson John Clark.

Frances Davis Celebrates 100th Birthday

Frances Davis is known as a very special woman. Not only is she a faithful member of the Sand Hill, Ky., Church, she is also the church pianist, all made remarkable by her age. She celebrated her 100th birthday on April 29, 2018. On that day nearly 200 friends, neighbors, and former students from the community and church gathered at the Anna Community Hall to celebrate the happy occasion. They enjoyed a photo album of family pictures from her long life, and refreshments were served. Long-time friends shared many memories.

Members of the church and friends worked long hours to make the day memorable for everyone. Several pastors and their wives came to honor Davis for her faithful years of service to God and His Church. Steve Haley, president of the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference, greeted those in attendance.

Special guest Diane Fish represented Holbrook Indian School, Holbrook, Ariz., an institution visited and financially supported by Davis and her late husband, Buford Davis. Fish presented a beautiful piece of Indian pottery to Davis as an expression of the school’s gratitude for the Davis’ generosity and support.

During the Sand Hill Sabbath services on the following Sabbath, May 5, Davis said that she had one word to describe her birthday: “perfect.”

Louisville Southside Hispanic Company Granted Church Status

The Louisville Southside Hispanic Company rejoiced on April 28, 2018. On that day, the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference organized them from a company to church status.

Just a year before, the company was told they could no longer rent the building they were using. This was not only discouraging, but also put them in jeopardy of disbanding. As they struggled to find a new place to meet, the Lord presented an opportunity to rent a church building with the option to buy.

Members of the congregation praised God as Steve Haley, president of the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference; Armando de Leon, Hispanic coordinator; and Walkyr Montilla, pastor, presented the news that the company had been granted church status. The Louisville Southside Hispanic Church was organized with 62 members.

Nelson Silva, D.Min., Ordained at Camp Meeting

During the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference Camp Meeting at Highland Academy on Sabbath, June 2, 2018, Nelson Silva, D.Min., was ordained to the Gospel ministry. Steve Haley, D.Min., president of the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference, welcomed Orlando Vazquez, who gave the ordination devotional message. Vazquez, born in Cuba, fled to the United States in the 1980s after being imprisoned for his faith.

Vazquez spoke of meeting Silva soon after his arrival to Indianapolis, Ind., saying that he could tell from the very beginning that Silva had both talent and commitment to serve the youth. He further noted that Silva and his wife, April, have always demonstrated a partnership in serving God and His Church. In concluding his remarks, Vazquez charged the Silvas to continue to pray daily, inviting Jesus to be the center of their home as He has been throughout their 15-year marriage.

Silva felt called to pastoral ministry early in his life, when chosen by his graduating class to be the senior class pastor at Ricardo Greenidge Adventist Academy in Caracas, Venezuela. In 1999, after coming to the United States, he decided to focus on youth ministry at Andrews University. After graduating from Andrews in 2003, he became a bilingual home and school advisor for the public school system in Indianapolis, and also served as a volunteer youth pastor, eventually becoming a salaried pastor in the Hispanic Brownsburg and Chapel West churches.

After completing a master of divinity equivalency at Andrews, Silva enrolled in Fuller Theological Seminary, earning his doctor of ministry in youth leadership in 2013. In July of 2016, Haley shared with Silva his unique vision for public campus, education, and Hispanic ministries in the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference. On August 1 of that same year, Silva joined the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference as associate youth director.

Richardsons Celebrate 60 Years

Bill and Sandra Richardson celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on June 8, 2018. The Richardsons spent 30 of those years on the faculty and staff at Andrews University. Bill Richardson was chair of the Religion Department for 12 years, and served as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences for eight years. Sandra Richardson served as executive assistant in the Physical Therapy Department. In 2009 they retired to the Jackson, Tenn., area to be near their daughter and son-in-law, Cindy and Roy Schmidt. They are active in the Jackson Church, where Bill Richardson frequently preaches and teaches. The Richardsons have two more children, daughter Cheri (Ken) Leffler, who live near Landstuhl, Germany; and son Steve (Andrea) Richardson, who live in Jacksonville, Fla. The Richardsons have eight grandchildren.

Camp Hawthorne Reboots

Nowadays, passers-by pull over to take a closer look at the lake that sits in the center of Camp Hawthorne. It’s no surprise, though. With the recent upgrades to the lake and to the grounds, it’s really hard to miss. Drivers on Highway 20 are almost blinded by the sunbeams bouncing off the sparkling waters in the lake. And, if that doesn’t get their attention, the fountain spouting up into the air in the center of the lake will do it easily.

Gregory Mack, president of Southeastern Conference (SEC), stated, “We will continue to develop our campground so that it is a sought after destination for ministry events, but also a more enjoyable place for the entire Southeastern family to be refreshed and renewed.” Camp Hawthorne has been the primary site of Southeastern ministry events for more than 40 years. Recently, it received a long list of upgrades to ready it for future ministry to the next generations.

New additions to Camp Hawthorne include a floating dock, gazebos overlooking the lake, water tricycles, paddles boats, and more. The recent upgrades to the campground total nearly $2 million.

With the purchase of five new campus buses, campers can now ride around the campground in comfort and style. Senior members often catch the bus from their cabins to all points on campus.

Camp Hawthorne now features four elevated gazebos overlooking the lake. Campers can gather for a meal or simply to relax and fellowship.
In 2017 the campground’s main pavilion received nearly $1 million dollars worth of renovations, and, to date, the upgrades across the campus total nearly $2 million dollars. Besides the sparkling lake and the new fountain, campers will be pleased to see the return of the beach to the center lake, which is fully equipped with showers and beach chairs. Also, a floating dock has been installed where campers can board one of several paddle boats and water tricycles. There have been extensive upgrades to the cabins, with bathroom upgrades in the near future.

Camp Hawthorne is also high-tech. Fiber optic cable is running throughout the campus, and the buildings are currently being wired for Wi-Fi throughout the entire campground.

The young athletes and thrill seekers will want to visit the brand new 400-foot zip line and obstacle course. Close by, campers can gather for outdoor Vespers around the bonfire. What’s great is that these are only partial upgrades, and campers will have to stay tuned for the extensive list of upgrades in store for the near future.

With all of the upgrades, the southeastern administration is seeking to make Camp Hawthorne a prime destination for ministry and local community events. Recently, the North American Division chose Camp Hawthorne as the host site for the Division Finals of the 2018 season of the Pathfinder Bible Experience. Conference administrators are also working with local community leaders to ensure they recognize Camp Hawthorne as a destination for community events, and a place where the community can be served. With a recent accreditation designation from the American Camp Association, it is evident that Camp Hawthorne truly is becoming a destination for quality events — large and small.

It is one more place where mission-driven initiatives can be advanced, and people can retreat and recharge. There is no doubt that Camp Hawthorne will continue to be a place where Southeastern will share hope and restore wholeness.

Apopka Church Connects with Tech

Elizabeth Byrd lived in Lower Kingswood, UK, and connected to the Mount Olive Church in Apopka, Fla., through the church’s live online broadcast every Sabbath. Byrd and her husband, David, experienced much success and failure throughout their lives. Their greatest struggle was her battle with cancer during her early 20s. This struggle led Byrd to seek for answers outside of herself. She was always curious about her husband’s odd ways and practices, like not eating pork and not working on Saturday.

Through prayer and study, Byrd became converted to the Seventh-day Adventist message and desired baptism. After learning of the church from a family member, she began tuning in to the Mount Olive online service each week for worship. Even after two years of waiting, she was determined to be baptized.

Finally, Byrd travelled more than 5,000 miles from the UK to the Mount Olive Church, and requested baptism from Carl Ware, pastor. Three days before her baptism, she fell in her driveway and ruptured her maxilla, and displaced her front teeth from their roots. Because she could not take anesthetic medications, the dentist was unable to replace the impacted teeth, and told her there was nothing they could do. However, nothing would deter her from being baptized. Family and friends witnessed as she became a baptized member of the Mount Olive Church on Sabbath morning, March 17, 2018.

As the family celebrated her newfound joy, Byrd began complaining of feeling tired and exhausted. She went to lay down, and after several hours her husband went to check on her, and noted she was unresponsive and did not recognize him. After being rushed to the hospital, Byrd was admitted for emergency treatment. While the family waited and prayed for the best possible outcome, their worst fears were realized when the doctors told them she had passed away.

Elizabeth Byrd’s funeral was held at Mount Olive, surrounded by church and family members. The church family prays for her family and encourages them with these words: “We cannot, Lord, thy purpose see. But all is well done by thee.” Byrd’s untimely death is yet another reason to anxiously await the soon coming of the Lord.
EDUCATION will prepare you with the skills and knowledge to work a trade, but life skills and learning to navigate from a college environment into a post-collegiate career can be harder to develop. That’s where mentors with industry experience can become invaluable partners on your journey — mentors like Lynelle Callender, D.N.P., R.N., Adventist University of Health Sciences’ (ADU) associate professor and vice chair of online nursing, who was inducted into the Association of Black Seventh-day Adventist Nurses (ABAN) in March of 2018, although she has worked actively as a mentor for some time prior to that.

The 2018 ABAN meeting took place on the campus of Oakwood University (OU) in Huntsville, Ala., during its Alumni Weekend. Callender visited the campus to take part in the meeting, and was invited to speak about ADU’s online master of science in nursing (MSN) programs to a group of OU graduating nursing seniors. While speaking to the students at the nurse advisory meeting, Callender offered to mentor the students, and was later contacted by two of the students, Danielle Kemp and Christine Haye.

Callender explained, “It’s my way of giving back, witnessing, and sharing God’s love, grace, and blessings with young nursing professionals.” She’s excited for this opportunity to work with students from OU, and stated, “Many OU students had never heard of ADU, so beginning a new collaborative relationship between the two colleges was monumental.”

She communicates with her mentees via email, texts, phone calls, and face to face, as she addresses concerns and questions many graduating students are facing, such as interview preparation, time management, balancing work and life schedules, and decisions about post-graduate education. Through this contact, the two students became interested in ADU and Florida Hospital.

Danielle Kemp described how Callender met her in person at Florida Hospital’s Heritage Hire event, and led her on a tour of ADU’s campus: “I remember never being interested in pursuing my master’s … what made me reconsider was talking to Dr. Lynelle … discussing my goals about … working for Florida Hospital. If it wasn’t for her mentorship and kindness towards me, I would have never pursued this opportunity.”

Both graduates have now accepted positions at Florida Hospital, and both plan to enroll in ADU’s MSN program in the future with Callender guiding them. The mentorship work that Callender is doing is not only a great service to the nursing community, but builds a bridge between two sister Adventist schools, allowing students to pursue post-graduate education in nursing in a similarly mission-focused environment.

When asked about her experience as a mentee, Christine Haye said it has been a learning experience. She said, “Dr. Callender’s friendly personality and positive attitude allowed me to remain calm and relaxed, improve my confidence, and acquire the necessary skills for transition into the program. I am extremely grateful to have experienced this special time with her and to know that the seed she has planted will one day become a full fruit.”

ADU strives to develop skilled professionals who live the healing values of Christ, and Callender recognizes the importance of continuing to mentor students beyond the time they spend in their classrooms. She plans to mentor both students until they become mentors themselves. She concluded, “It’s the circle of life — reach one, teach one!”
Student Club Places Second in National Competition

Southern Adventist University’s Enactus team placed second in their league at the national level this summer. This was their highest placement to date, putting them in the top seven percent of all 444 Enactus teams in the United States.

“The idea is we all win because we’re helping people,” said Michelle Doucoumes, Enactus sponsor and assistant professor in the School of Business. “Every Enactus project is not just to raise money, but also to improve people’s lives.”

Thousands of students around the world make up the Enactus network, which aims to engage the next generation of entrepreneurial leaders to better the world. Southern’s team paired this mission with their theme of the year — “re-creation” — and focused their projects on God’s creative and redemptive power.

The team’s five projects included helping a struggling refugee grow his catering business, fundraising for a project that restores eyesight in India, shrinking the food deserts in Chattanooga by educating and equipping local young people, mentoring high school girls in computer programming, and holding an event to inspire and connect students with notable business alumni.

“It is humbling to see how God led every step of the way,” said AJ Sato, ’18, Enactus team president this past year. “Each of our members went above and beyond to empower our community, and it has truly been an honor to serve with them this past year.”

University Receives Grant for Race-Related Projects

This summer, Southern received a $50,000 grant from Lumina Foundation to fund a multi-pronged project addressing racial justice and equity on campus. Project components include recording and sharing oral histories, inviting nationally recognized speakers to Southern, funding creative student-led programs, and researching the impact of all these efforts on employee and student attitudes.

“Southern has an opportunity to be a model of a large institution that weaves racial reconciliation into its DNA, even though trying to achieve this goal can be challenging,” said Kristie Wilder, J.D., dean of the School of Social Work and co-director of the project.

From a pool of 312 nation-wide applicants, Southern was one of 19 colleges and universities selected to receive funding from Lumina’s Fund for Racial Justice and Equity.

“These campuses have shown a willingness to address racial disparities at a systemic level,” said Jamie Merisotis, president and CEO of Lumina Foundation. “They recognize that achieving equitable results is about more than promoting diversity — it’s about whether the institution fosters a climate in which every student feels welcome, and has the same opportunity to earn a degree or certificate of value, regardless of race or ethnicity.”

In these efforts, Wilder and the other co-directors — Stephanie Guster, M.S.W., assistant professor of social work, and Rachel Williams-Smith, Ph.D., dean of the School of Journalism and Communication — have the full support of Southern’s administration.

“Each individual student on our diverse campus is infinitely valuable in God’s eyes, and we want them to feel that love here — to feel safe, valued, and at home,” said David Smith, Ph.D., president of Southern. “This project will be another piece in our ongoing efforts to foster that kind of environment on our campus.”

Sandra Oglesby Named 2018 NAACP Mother of the Year

Sandra E. Oglesby, a member of Ephesus Church in Wilmington, N.C., is the winner of the New Hanover County NAACP Mother of the Year Award. She is the first representative from Ephesus to win this great honor.

Each year, the New Hanover County NAACP asks the churches in the county to select an individual to represent their church as the Mother (or Woman) of the Year, and support her in raising monetary funds. This fundraising project was initiated in 1955 to supplement the local, state, and national NAACP budget. The woman who raises the most funds becomes the county’s Mother of the Year.

Oglesby’s first assignment as Mother of the Year was representing New Hanover County as she attended the North Carolina Coronation Brunch. The Coronation Brunch was held at HillSong Baptist Church in Chapel Hill, N.C. The Coronation Brunch is held to recognize Mother/Woman of the Year recipients from across the state of North Carolina for their service to the NAACP, and their contributions to the community. The brunch is where the announcement of the winner for the state of North Carolina takes place. Oglesby placed in the top five from the state, affording her a prize.

As Mother of the Year, Oglesby will represent the NAACP in local events, including the NAACP Freedom Fund Banquet, MLK Breakfast, and MLK Parade, to name a few. Oglesby hasn’t been waiting around for special events to attend, though. Moments after being crowned Mother of the Year, she encouraged the congregation to invest in their health by participating in a University of North Carolina research project on the area’s water quality.

Oglesby gives credit to God and thanks to her husband, Clarence L. Thomas III, D.Min., and the rest of her family. She also expressed enormous gratitude for Derrin Davis, pastor, and the Ephesus Church family for helping to make this happen. They all share in this great honor together. 🙏

CAMP, VANN D., 81, born April 10, 1936, in Albemarle, NC, died Jan. 30, 2018 in Walla Walla, WA.

Vann graduated from Fletcher Academy, Fletcher, NC, in 1954 and Andrews University (formerly Emmanuel Missionary College) Berrien Springs, MI, in 1958 with a degree in business. COLLIER, BILL DEAN. 79, of Huntsville, AL, born Oct. 15, 1938 in the cotton mill town of Belmont, NC, died March 30, 2018. Following two heart attacks in less than a day, Bill underwent open heart surgery with five bi-passes, but then began experiencing strokes and developed pneumonia. A celebration of Bill’s life was held a week later at Highland Church in Portland, TN, where Bill resided for 35 years.

He attended Southern Missionary College (now Southern Adventist University), near Chattanooga, TN. In 1965, he was drafted into the U.S. Army and served for two years. After graduating from the Dell School of Medical Technology in Asheville, NC, Bill worked in Adventist hospital laboratories in Florida, Kentucky, and Tennessee. He and his wife, Nan (née Williams), opened their own medical lab in 1976 in Gallatin, TN. LabCorp bought the business 18 years later, and hired Bill to manage the company’s Nashville office until 2004, when he pursued certification as a licensed massage therapist. DALTON, CLARICE CHRISTINE APLIN. 87, of Lynn Haven, FL, died June 17, 2017 in Panama City, FL, born Oct. 19, 1929 to Harold and Martha Aplin at Washington Adventist Hospital in Takoma Park, MD. She often remarked that was the same day HMS Richards started the Voice of Prophecy! She attended J. N. Andrews Church School in Takoma Park, then Shenandoah Valley Academy in New Market VA - graduated in 1947. She enrolled in pre-nursing at Washington Missionary College (now Wau), but soon realized God was calling her to be a teacher. She switched to Secondary Education, graduated in 1950. Later she took graduate studies at Wright State University, Dayton, OH. During a College Ingathering campaign, “Participate in ’48”, Christine was soliciting while being supported by a singing band in a pick-up truck. On the ride back home, she began talking with one of the young men who had been singing. Arriving at her house, he got off the truck to help her down, and the driver drove off. He walked her to the door, asked her for a date, and ran back to the college. Neither ever dated another! They were married June 5, 1950 in the “old” Takoma Park Church by William H. Shephard, president of WMC. Christine taught both elementary and secondary levels at Adventist schools including Church School and Junior Academy, Dayton, OH; Spring Valley Academy, Centerville, OH; and Church School, Panama City. She often said she taught every grade from 1 through 12! She was very active in her church, variously serving as Sabbath School teacher, church clerk, bulletin secretary, religious liberty leader, Pathfinder director, and other offices. Christine was a Master Guide, particularly enjoying camping, bird watching, astronomy, and gardening. She enjoyed playing softball with her children (especially pitching), playing the organ and piano for church, and writing stories and poetry. She was a published author. For the last 15 years, she was a member of the North Bay Church near Panama City.

Although very busy with teaching and serving her church, she was an excellent homemaker. She baked delicious whole wheat bread, served wholesome, healthful vegetarian meals to her family, and she could really make her sewing machine “hum”!

One of her children posted this, “A great lady, the quintessential teacher, she possessed the patience of a saint, and always showered her students, friends, and family with kindness and love. She will be greatly missed. Her life will be daily celebrated.” Surely, she exemplified the words of Proverbs 31!

She is survived by her husband of 67 years, A. Stanley Dalton Sr.; five children: Stan Jr. (Josiane), Mark (Marilee), Dori (Ed) Neufeld, Karyn (Art) Stagg, and John (Carolyn); 12 grandchildren: Emily, Kristin, Mannie, AJ, Chris, Eric, Julie, Mitchell, Didier, Andy, Kristi, Caty; and 13 great-grandchildren: Aidyn, Gwen, Lydia, Evi, Sebbi, Ethan, Dylan, Avery, Tatum, Audrey, Marielle, Leo, and Adam. She is now resting in Collegedale Memorial Park, beside her parents, awaiting Jesus’ return. Christine’s faith remained strong to the end in the certainty that “Joy comes in the morning.”
DE LOS RIOS, REBECA PUPO BALBOA, 67, born Nov. 6, 1950 in Holguin, Cuba to Juan Pupo and Josefa Balboa, died May 21, 2018 in Orlando, FL. She grew up in a home full of joy and music. Her favorite hobbies included playing the piano, accordion, painting, reading, cycling, and track and field among other things. But her most precious memories included accompanying her dad, a generous man with a fervent love for the Gospel, as he gave people Bible studies.

At the age of 18, a few months before the departure of her parents from Cuba, Rebeca married Rolando de los Rios, a young minister whom she had known as a child. From that union, their only daughter, Raiza, was born. She quickly became her comfort during those long 11 years away from her family. That time was a training period for Rebeca who became an excellent and dynamic pastor’s wife.

In 1980, the family moved to the United States. The family settled in New Jersey where Rolando served as pastor and director of the Spanish-language ministries. Rebeca began to work in a Greek factory, and before the year was over, she had already become the assistant, and then the laboratory director. When Rolando started working on the television program, ‘Ayer, Hoy, Mañana’ (Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow), Rebeca joined the team as secretary, a job that took them to the suburbs of Orlando in 1987.

In Florida, Rebeca exercised her longest ministry as a volunteer in the Spanish-language Department of the Florida Conference, where her husband served as vice president. Later, she became director of the Spanish Children’s Ministries, Singles and Family Life Ministries, a title that she held until her death. For more than 20 years, she passionately led the children and families of Florida, organizing trainings and conventions for Sabbath School teachers, couples, and singles, while supporting her husband in evangelism.

Rebeca was a lover of her family and friends. Her love for parties, trips, banquets, and functions had the purpose of uniting her loved ones so they could enjoy unforgettable moments. In her final days of illness, her health did not allow her to work, and even while in the hospital, she maintained those qualities that made her unique — her missionary and generous spirit and her love for the Gospel.

She is survived by her husband of 49.5 years, Rolando; one daughter, Raiza (Leonard) Fernandez; two granddaughters: Kassandra and Brianna Fernandez; three sisters: Norma, Juana, and Angela; and a large family of brothers-in-law; sisters-in-law; nieces; nephews; and friends, which include those who are as close as family.

Services were conducted at the Forest City Spanish Church in Orlando. Rebeca was laid to rest at Highland Memory Gardens in Apopka, FL.

MALCOLM, DR. ROY ENFORD, 84, born Dec. 12, 1934 in the parish of St. Elizabeth, Jamaica, to the late Samuel and Reubena Roache Malcolm, and was the eighth of 12 children, died April 29, 2018 in Huntsville, AL.

As he grew, the quiet sparkle in his eyes reflected genius intelligence, sharp wit, and infectious, hilarious humor; his unassuming demeanor masked boundless artistry and creativity, implacable focus and determination, and divinely embedded gifts of leadership, teaching, and musicianship.

These qualities won the hearts of those he encountered, and laid the foundation for a lifetime of success and achievement, while pivotal people, events, and circumstances shaped and/or steered the trajectory of his journey through life. One elementary school teacher in particular, impacted Roy’s life in so many ways. There is no doubt that Mr. Percy, educator, was instrumental in influencing young Roy to follow in his footsteps. The stories he told with that quiet humor that left you holding your sides! He was a bright student, skipped the fifth grade, and entered Kingsway Academy with aplomb.

Roy’s musical ability was evident at an early age. Although he had a measure of formal training, the depth of his giftedness asserted itself in unexpected ways...watching someone at church playing the Hammond organ, then teaching himself to master it...asking a total stranger on the side of the road if he could try his hand at playing the accordion...then mastering it so quickly the astonished man let him take it home...he would make arrangements with him later...amazing! It was that way with each instrument he mastered — piano, organ, violin, guitar, fife, banjo, mandolin, mouth organ, and melodica. The impetus for what would later blossom into choral mastery initiated with the birth of the Echo Quartet during his Academy years.

The Malcolm family’s loving commitment to Roy’s academic future was unconditional; they were so proud of him and believed there were no limits to his potential. His education would continue; they would provide all the financial assistance they could. Roy worked in the Civil Service Office of Titles after he graduated in 1953 (Carmen Manning McPherson recommended him; his beautiful penmanship made getting the job a cinch!). He also worked as a secondary teacher for the East Jamaica Conference from 1953 to 1955. These jobs helped him save money while preparing to attend Kingsway College in Canada. He worked through college as a colporteur, received a master in theology from Andrews, and, in 1963, accepted a call to be the principal of Bermuda Institute. The things God was able to do through him while there were phenomenal! During this time, he met an extraordinary young woman, Edrene Deshield — someone that would prove to be one of the most important people in his life.

Five years later, during the summer of 1968, Roy’s tenure at Oakwood began; he was the new registrar. A major decision had to be made. He and Edrene were encouraged to consider waiting to marry, or doing so before the school year began. Mercy! This definitely mandated fasting and prayer...three days of it! The Lord honored the petitions she put before Him, and gave clear direction. She agreed to marry, they were engaged, and on Sunday, September 15, 1968, Roy and Edrene were married on Oakwood’s campus in Carter Hall. Their journey had begun. He earned the doctor of philosophy at Ohio State University in 1974, while still serving at Oakwood. God blessed their home with five beautiful children as he faithfully served five presidents. This campus — this chosen place where angels still stand guard, these grounds that are holy — is where his children grew up, where God blessed what he envisioned, created, introduced and implemented, where he will rest.

He is survived by his wife of 49 years, Edrene; daughter, Chanél (Dale) Fubler; son, Royce (Kelli); daughter, Charène (Norman) Carrington; son, Peter; and daughter, Chäréa Malcolm; adopted daughters: Victoria Pearman and Laurie Wright-Gaines (John); five grandchildren: Chadéla and Dale Fubler, Bentley Malcolm, and Malcolm and Carter Carrington; two adopted grandsons: Simeon Pearman and John Gaines; three brothers: Frank, Ralph and Cleon; one sister, Evelyn Lopez; one aunt, Mary Malcolm; cousins: Diahn Malcolm-Flair (Mark) and Anne Malcolm; one godson, Lloyd Mallory; best friends, Dr. Lance Shand and Dr. Sherman Cox and their families; special friends/extended family, the Gunn, Pyfrom, Wilson, and Pullins families; a host of nieces; nephews; cousins; generations of endeared Oakwood students; mentees; and friends.

SUMPTER, MARY DIANE, 74, the oldest daughter of Charlie Merkerson and Mary Jeanette (Nelloms) Merkerson, born Jan. 10, 1944, on a crisp day in Atlanta, GA, died June 20, 2018. The Navy officer and housewife loved this sparkling-eyed and glossy-curl’d bundle of joy. Always a curious learner, Diane, as she was affectionately called by her family, attended William J. Scott Elementary School and maintained an honor roll status. She attended L. J. Price High School, where she continued to excel academically to reach the top 10 percent honor status of her class. After graduating high school, Mary received a full scholarship to Spelman College/Grady Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, where she graduated as class salutatorian. Four months after starting a nursing career at Grady Hospital, Mary was offered a head nursing position pending her passing the nursing state board examination. Her exam results were stellar, and Mary became a head nurse at age 20! In 1964, Mary Frances Thompson and her husband, the late Theodore Thompson, invited Mary to ride with them to Camp Meeting in Hawthorne, FL. While at Camp Meeting, Mary met Elder Ward Sumpter, then associate publishing secretary for the South Atlantic Conference. Two years later, on May 1, 1966, Mary and Ward were married at Atlanta Berean Church. The next year, the Sumpthers moved to Greensboro, NC, where Ward had accepted an assignment as the publishing director. After a few years, their first child, Shernanda, was born. When Shernanda was four months old, the Sumpthers moved again; Ward accepted a pastorship in Tallahassee, FL. While there, their second child, Cedric, was born. A year later, the Sumpthers moved to Berrien Springs, MI, where both Mary and Ward attended Andrews University. Later, the Sumpthers moved to Loma Linda, CA, where Ward enrolled in Loma Linda University. While there, Elder Robert L. Woodfork informed the Sumpthers that they were assigned to the Atlanta Boulevard district in Georgia. During this pastoral assignment, Ward held an evangelistic crusade with Mary actively involved as the Bible instructor; they were blessed to baptize more than 100 people. In 1976, after another evangelistic crusade, the Sumpthers baptized more than 250 precious souls. As a result, a larger building was needed to accommodate the church growth. The Sumpthers moved to Tampa, FL, where Mary worked as a public health nurse. After one year, her husband accepted a ministry assignment back in Georgia. Mary accepted a position as school nurse with the Atlanta Public Schools system, where she served for almost 30 years. Mary loved traveling with her husband to help spread the Good News of salvation and eternal life with the one true God. Their missionary journeys included Canada, Jamaica, Puerto Rico, England, Scotland, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland, France, Germany, Bosnia, Africa, Vietnam, Japan, Malaysia, and China. In 2007, after years of travel to ensure the spread of the Gospel message, Mary and Ward made their last exciting international trip to Italy and Greece, accompanied by friends: Elder Vanard and Ruth Mendinghall, Elder Willie and Vicky Taylor, and Drs. Delbert and Susan Baker. After the untimely death of her husband in 2013, Mary continued to lead an active life. She traveled to a women's conference with Eula Winston, and attended events and interesting venues with Jean Peterson (her son-in-law’s mother). In addition to her children, Shernanda (Berry) Peterson and Cedric Sumpter, Mary leaves to cherish her memories, her mother: Mary Nelloms; two sisters: Irish Nelloms and Melaney Nelloms; two grandsons: Brad and Trey; cousins: Wynona (Calvin) Preston and Gail Strickland; a host of extended family members; and friends.

WITTER, NORMA E., of Sequatchie, TN, born Aug. 23, 1944, died June 10, 2017. Norma taught school most of her adult life with the last school being Jasper Adventist Christian School in Jasper, TN. She was active at the Jasper Church, and often sang beautiful songs she had learned while serving with her family as a missionary in Africa. She was also instrumental in beginning weekly fellowship dinners at church, as she saw no reason people should go home and eat by themselves when they ate alone all week. She continued to organize those dinners until just a few weeks prior to her death when she learned she was ill. Those left to cherish her memory are her husband of 49 years, Charles Witter; two sons: David Witter and Eric (Sarah) Witter; two brothers: Kenneth Ake of Dallas, TX, and Jim Ake of Washington State; three grandchildren: Nathan, Mary Beth Ann, and Kevin Witter; a host of friends; and former students. The funeral services were officiated by Pastor Homer Barrett. Interment followed at Laurelbrook Cemetery in Dayton, TN, where she awaits the Lord’s call on that resurrection morning.

Ken Thought He Had Prepared

Ken, a member at the Waynesville, NC church was familiar with estate planning. Not only did he name Carolina Conference as his beneficiary, he encouraged others to do the same.

Ken, like many others, was so certain he had properly executed his will that he didn’t review it for needed updates or verification.

When his safe was opened after his passing, his original, unsigned will was in it. However, an unsigned will is like having no will.
